Probabilities David Contreras
"Why is beauty created just to be destroyed? Tesla? Give me one really good answer that doesn't sound rehearsed or reiterated or quoted. Please, I beg you, give me one really good answer that sounds original, that sounds like it was conceived in a human being's soul," says Jason Warner to his obese cat in "Jason Warner's False Equanimity of Time," just one of twenty-three short stories/novellas in the aptly titled Probabilities. With a cast of characters that includes a futuristic dreamer, a thirty-six-year-old lost in time, a prodigious painter, a group of suppressed filmmakers forced underground, a skater girl falling in love in the early '90s, a reclusive children's author, Roger Federer beyond his prime, a Hopi couple in the 15th century, President Barack Obama, and nearly a hundred others, this is a kaleidoscope of what it means to be alive, what was, what is, and what could be.
