Remembering Joys and Heartaches: Stories of My Life and Times During the War-Torn Years of the 1940s Doris Honour Gerard
In this second book of the Author's "Remembering" trilogy, the stories continue, and they present unforgettable characters as they play out their lives during the most wide-spread War the world has ever seen. With her remarkable memory, journals and letters, Doris Honour Gerard relates the changes in the lives of her friends and family, her city, state and nation in this remarkable book. She intertwines adventures and misadventures, humor, love and romance, as well as the sadness and horrors of war as experienced by the characters. Reading Gerard's second "Remembering," gives the reader a revealing look at the disrupted lives of the times, the heartaches and pain caused by War and, in spite of the turmoil, the excitement, joys and romance that she and her husband found together.
