The Never Ending Hike: The first six months; from philosophy to practice May 1st 2011 to November 1st 2011 Steven Lange
Dedication
"I would like to dedicate this book to all those people who have ever felt lost, trapped, or hopeless. To those who are sad and in despair whether their entanglements be a bland suburban life, a physical ailment, a drug or alcohol addiction, an insane family member, lover, or just inner emotional struggle.
We have all of us been one of these from time to time. We have all witnessed them as well. Whether it is a young girl who is just so sad, alone, and full of despair that she sobs in solitude. Or a person of old age who doesn't seem to understand where all their life, family, and friends have gone.
Those who suffer in the dark solitary places scream out to the lord. Those of us who still suffer and have suffered abuse. I want you to know that the Lord always hears your prayer. I never thought so until he heard mine. Things in this world always change.
I broke free of most of my entanglements. I dropped most of the people who abused me along the way. I try to live my life in appreciation now. Every moment, every day, is just a gift. Just something I never thought I would see. Something I am thankful for because I am healthy, blessed, and free." (Steven Lange, The Never ending Hike)
